ARIZONA MOUNTAINEER

It is getting to be that time of year again when cool-er Yosemite beckons to Arizona's sweaty masses who must labor up hot rocks, cherishing each smidgen of shade they can find.

Unless, of course, they go on the Mt. Humphries or Mr. Elden climbs scheduled for June. That's cool.

SWAP MEET AT SOUTH MOUNTAIN 28 JUNE 2004

Barbarians bring something dead to sear over the charcoal provided by AMC. (You others enjoy your cold tofu.) AMC will also have a beer permit so if you brought some you will not be cited for possession, at least. Parks does not issue permits for most varieties of idiocy, however, so behave yourselves.

Sort through your gear — climbing, camping, cycling, diving, canoeing, skiing, skateboarding, and, uh, like that — find anything someone else might find useful. Mark a modest price on it and bring it to sell or swap for other neat junk.

Directions — down Central Ave. into South Mountain Park.

Look for directions posted near the entrance station as to which ramada we will be in.

The trouble (and the fires) begin at 6:00. There may be a brief business meeting around 7:00 (something about spending money) if President Bruce deems it meet and right and politic to call one. Otherwise, let sybaritic excesses or liaises faire commercial greed (your choice) have free reign until 9:00, when they kick us all out.

Members page — Comments by Wally (Ed).

The Advertisement below is something of a departure for the AMC. Yes, we have exhorted members to make their wishes known at council meetings and forums (and thank you for that). AMC's reps on various councils and commissions have stated a club position in access issues. Individual AMC members have asked for support for causes ranging from decrying the Taliban's savage treatment of Afghan women to giving wolves and mountain lions a chance. But now is about the only time that I can recall that the AMC has directly urged all members to sign on for a cause — saving access to climbing in the the Oak Flat/Queen Creek area.

We have lost favorite climbing spots in the past — The Bolus on Camelback, the Carefree Boulders (sob!), Pinnacle Peak (for years, although we now have restricted access to some of it). Other threats loom — Little Granite Mountain, the North McDowells, and Arizona. State Land in general.

But the Oak Flats/Queen Creek area is a treasure, so much so that an entire, thick guidebook has been produced to list and describe its hundreds of climbs. The Phoenix Boulder blast and its precursors have held nearly twenty years of competitions there, involving thousands of climbers. On any day you will find rock rats of all persuasions and skill levels, from many states, testing themselves in the canyons and on the boulders. There are still hundreds of potential climbs waiting to be done. It is an climbing area worth fighting for. For this reason the AMC board has approved publishing the ad below at no charge. Read it. Heed it!

NOTE: See page 10 for late developments.

Queen Creek climbing area access issue Climb it? Or mine it?

Recreational access to the Queen Creek climbing area is being threatened by a copper mine that has been proposed by the Resolution Copper Company.

Resolution Copper is trying to take over Oak Flat campground via a congressionally legislated land swap, which in turn would threaten access to all these areas: Queen Creek Canyon, Apache Leap, Devils Canyon, Hackberry Canyon, etc.

We need your help to keep this world-class climbing area (and home of the Phoenix BoulderBlast) from disappearing forever into a big hole in the ground. Join the Friends of Queen Creek!

We are not opposed to mining. But we are FOR ACCESS! We need to make Resolution Copper develop their mine in such a way as to preserve recreational access to these public lands.

A REALLY NICE CLIMB - BABOQUIVARI

The following was not intended as a story for the AMC Newsletter; some of you who are on Erik's mail list have already seen it. But most AMC'ers have not. I am printing it here since it describes what I consider one of Arizona's classic and most enjoyable climbs. It is definitely a climb but, competently led, it is within the capabilities of most all of us. Paul Norberg has led annual pilgrimages to Babo for several years. Sign on if you can next time it is offered.

Just a little beta from a great weekend trip.

Dan Bolin, Maria Stoianova and I summitted Baboquivari via the South East Arete. What a fine route, consistent with many alpine experiences I've had, and maybe some I've dreamed about.

Here is a quick recap, and I would be happy to entertain questions, especially because conditions will soon be too hot for a pleasurable experie nce this year I fear. What follows is the Western approach across tribal lands. We experienced trails and roads in good conditions, as well as Native American festivities at the campground. All good stuff.

(I'll assume you can follow road map descriptions to the turn off pavement onto the dirt road leading toward Babo). To be honest, we got lost once on the dirt road portion. There are no signs now. You must do the following. Go downthe first, main dirt road for a period until you reach the first major right-hand option. It appears to head straight for Babo, and then veers southeast of Babo, or so it seems. Actually it turns back northeast into the Campground. (check guidebook directions, they are right on.)

The trail to the saddle is in excellent shape. We hefted backpacks and 4 liters of water for an overnight stay on the saddle. Maria's roommate Bea joined us, acting as Base Camp manager. (maybe someday she can even join the rock climbers of the world through an AMC basic rock class, but she held up marvelously in her appointed role). It would appear that one can easily find good campsites in and around the saddle area, so I won't tip my hat as to my favorite, but it was sure nice. Clear sky, rocky seats with a view, a little gin and tonic and then a dozen shooting stars for those of us (me) sleep challenged.

Just before sunrise, we took the trail up to the slabs of the Forbes route, and proceeded along Lion's Ledge. On the south side just before the end of theledge system, there is a major indentation into the regularity of the cliff, and just before that there is a crack system rising upward. It seemed like the obvious route, so I won't elaborate more. It had a tricky move or two, and then a run out across lower angle terrain. Dan led the first pitch while Maria and I came as separate seconds. This would appear to be the same basic low angle terrain one would enter from the northern approach on Lion's Ledge.

I swung on up the second pitch to an obvious notch atop the obvious 4th class chimney, with Maria clipping through behind. Dan led through and on up the vertical wall and further for about 120 feet, maybe to the base of the laid back headwall with a layback series of flakes right of the crest of the broad arete. Again, in my opinion, obvious route finding. This pitch was identified as the crux, and probably only the crux in terms of the more continuous 5.6-ish type of terrain.

Dan was standing in a bit of a chimney situation, and when Maria and I arrived I swung past a tree and onto something I guess I would loosely call a ledge. At least it sloped around the corner to the left, so I figured the two bolts were just out of sight. It would have been tempting, especially for better climbers just to keep on the arete, but it was actually a lot easier ground when I just stuck my nose around the corner. Lots of exposure and slight downclimbing moves that reminded me a little of the start of the third pitch on the Mace. Short but sweet.

Dan then finished off the obvious 5.3 dihedral to a good belay just above. We coiled our ropes into Kiwis to move up to the final notch. Downclimbing was much easier from an exposure perspective than I would have anticipated because the notch is huge, basically a large group could camp comfortably on and around it. Dan completed his yeoman work for the day by scampering up the loose blocks on the left side of the notch. He muttered something about the "questionnable pro" he used but he was quickly out of sight. When I came up last, I saw what he meant. He had slung a 1/2 inch bush about 6 inches tall. Now I know what Jeff Lowe talked about as a "delay" versus a "belay". Anyway we quickly descended the Forbes route back to camp. Please note that the whole ascent route is also fixed with rap stations and gear, though I would bring some slingage in case any is missing. You can rappel from trees, and the two bolts pretty easily with two ropes.

Great leading, Dan. Way to go Maria, for your first long rock multipitch, and thanks Bea for keep the (not literally) camp fires burning.

Cheers, —Erik F.

Despite a tough business climate for independent shops these days, a new one has opened at 2655 W. Guadalupe in Mesa. Stop by, check them out, wish them well — and buy something..

Fresh Info on Queen Cr/Oak Flats

AMC's Land Advocacy Chairman, Erik Filsinger, has sent out an electronic alert to AMC's on-line membership asking that immediate letters be sent to Rep. Renzi opposing an in-the-works land swap with Resolution Copper.

For background information check the "ad" on page 7. You may also go to www.FriendsofOueenCreek.com.

Erik cautions letter writers to be reasonable, respectful, and factual — intemperance costs credibility. Responsible mining is necessary. But the "block caving" method proposed for Oak Flat/Queen Creek has the potential to destroy the area for all recreational uses, birding, mountain biking, camping, hiking as well as climbing. Erik as a draft letter to begin with. Copies are available at this meeting. Address:

The Honorable Rick Renzi United States House of Representatives 2707 S. White Mountain Road. Suite E Show Low, Az 85901

While you are at it, send letters to Gov. Janet Napolitano and your own district representative.

Sound System Assistance Needed

We've kicked around the idea of getting some type of sound system for the AMC schools, so that the lead instructors don't have to YELL to be heard above all the noises at the parks where we hold classes.

Is there anyone out there who has experience with sound systems that could help investigate this idea? It needs to be portable, since it travels to and from classes. It should be easy to set up, since it would be used by amateurs! It should have at least one wireless handsfree microphone (but two would be nice for Basic school) and it should be usable outside.

If you have any experience with sound systems at all, please contact Sally Borg Larimer to talk more details: 480-425-9689. We'd like to explore some options and present it to the AMC board as a possible budget item for 2005.

- Sally Borg Larimer

When good enough is - just that!!!

I've been an AMC member for over 7 years, during which the club has introduced many changes.

As we categorize the clubs functions more and more I feel it steers away individuals volunteering to ultimately better the club. I understand there are safety issues. But it seems to me we are going beyond that.

Many of our members are in formal work scenarios. They are accustomed to a formal ladder of checks and balances. This work in a corporation. But I don't feel you should run a volunteer organization as you would a company. People participate because it is fun and they enjoy the freedom of the club. The reason so many of us are climbers is because of the freedom we feel while climbing.

In a perfect world it would be ideal to have a contingency plan for most situations. But I feel in a volunteer climbing club you need to allow a certain amount of freedom for individuals to try new ideas at their own pace.

It is how we have come to where we are now. And we won't be any worse off than we were before. If it does not work out- OH WELL!!

There are many instances when good enough is just that!!

— Mick Strole

NOLS First Aid Course

A ten-day First Responder Course will be held August 20-29 in Flagstaff. It is part of the Wilderness Medicine Institute under the National Outdoor Leadership School (NOLS). Tuition is $525. More information: pete_walka@nols.edu or 975 N. Manzanita Wy, Flagstaff, 86001. Phone 928-779-0061.

AMC has had no dealings with Mr. Walka but assumes a NOLS course may be of interest to some of our members. AMC's advanced first aid training for members has been through another firm for several years. None is scheduled for the moment.— Ed.

SCREE — BY Wally

Mick and Sherrie are long-time AMC'ers who have played a very active role in club affairs. He has headed up our Lead Classes for some time. So when Mick and Sherrie express dissatisfaction, as in the adjacent column, others should listen well.

It does seem that AMC gets more deeply embroiled in matters involving training and risk management and that the board's chief activity nowadays is constructing new hoops that everyone must jump through. I know other clubs are experiencing the same pressures and frustrations. When I stopped by the Mountaineers of Seattle with my list of things I wanted advice on, the reaction was "Yeah, that is on our list too. Got an answer?"

If it is any consolation, know that processes are ten times as labyrinthine in government, based on my experience in historic preservation work. AMC is free as a bird, relatively. But still, we are much more regimented as to what we feel we should do, when dealing with other AMC members, than even a few years ago.

I think these pressures may be having an adverse effect on the number of outings we offer. It seems to me that rather than inviting one and all to a climb and making a party of it for the good of the club, we tend to limit the group to a very few whom we know well. It would be a bit more trouble to open it to all, and that would help the club, but — leadership and safety responsibilities weigh in one's decision.

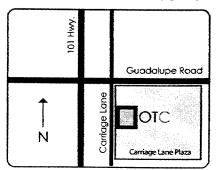

A committee has been working on a questionnaire that was intended to go to our list of lapsed members, asking "How Come? How can we improve the AMC?" It may be that we should broaden it to include current members too. I personally know some much valued people have dropped out mainly because of the "folderol", and I lament their going. But in the meantime —

If you have thoughts or suggestions on how to "loosen up" the club and help revive/enhance the sense of fun and camaraderie we may be in danger of losing, write me a note or send an e-mail. My address is in the front. My personal e-mail address is <wvegors@cox.net> which does not go through the club's website — if that matters to you. I'm looking for thoughtful ideas. Help AMC out! I'll print as many as I can. — Wally

AMC Outings

Participation in AMC outings requires club membership. Outings vary in degree of danger. When you participate in an outing you should be both physically and mentally prepared and equipped with the appropriate gear. You should always be aware of the risks involved in outdoor activities and conduct yourselves accordingly. The Outing Leader is not responsible for your safety; you are. Please contact the Outing Leader before going on an outing, discussing your capabilities with the Outing Leader. You must be over 18 years of age to participate, or must be accompanied by a parent or responsible adult, and obtain prior consent from the Outing Leader. Those accompanying minors are responsible for the minor's safety.
