Lead Climbing School

Arizona Mountaineering Club - Fall 2009

This is an advanced climbing class. Even if you don't plan on leading, you will learn much about the dynamics of climbing, and it will make you a safer climber. Protecting a climb is a different skill from climbing itself. We will talk about the dynamics of lead falls, how to prepare for a climb, the differences between single-pitch and multi-pitch, and the differences between clipping bolts and placing natural pro. There will be no "true" lead climbs during the class, but we will provide simulated leading exercises.

Class curriculum:

Tue	Lecture, slide show: introduction, the lead fall, equipment
Wed	Lecture, slide show: equipment (continued); the process and techniques of leading
Thu	Lecture, slide show: multi-pitch techniques, the descent, leader rescue, aid climbing
Sat	Hands-on practice: natural pro placement (Prescott)
Sun	Hands-on practice: leading on bolts (Prescott or Scottsdale)

Class schedule:

Sept 15	Tuesday	6:30 pm–9:30 pm	*North Mountain Park, Yavapai Ramada

A Rocky Mountain Summer Escape

In early August Susan Morris and I took our summer alpine rock climbing trip to Rocky Mountain National Park. We camped in the park, hiked the wonderful trails, and succeeded on our three climbing goals.

We love the granite on Lumpy Ridge and spent a great day on the classic line, White Whale, on Left Book. It is a three pitch 5.7 and just plain fun with varied crack climbing and route finding. We have done other routes on the crag, but I liked this one best so far. I had climbed it previously with Nigel Gregory, but this was my first time with Susan. The trail head has been moved back about ½ mile, so allow a little more time on the approach.

Our main alpine target was the Cables route on the North Face of Longs Peak. In “olden times”, valley outfitters had affixed steel cables on the face above the Boulder field. I suspect clients approached on horseback and then were hauled up the cliff bands using the cables. Fortunately for preserving the character of the place, the park service removed the cables many years ago, but they left a couple huge eyebolts to serve as rap anchors for an easy retreat from the summit.

We left the Longs Peak trailhead at 1:30 a.m. For the 16 hours we saw nothing but people! Seriously the whole thing was like “Piestewa Peak” on a spring morning. There was a constant steam of headlamps throughout the night. We left the hordes at the Boulder Field and headed straight up to Chasm View, where we could look horizontally across at 4 different teams on various routes on the Diamond.

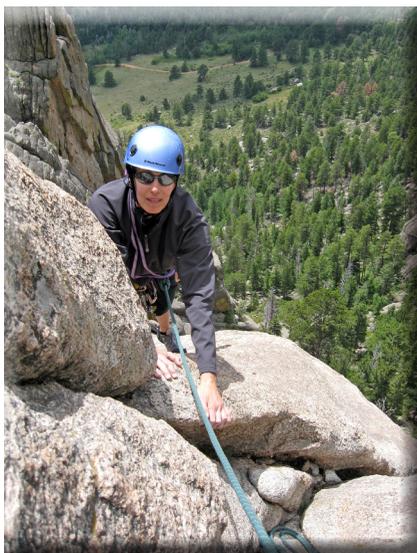

The North Face of Longs Peak

After locating the proper “Cables route” I was surprised to see about 50% of it covered in a half inch of black ice. What appears to have happened this year is that Colorado has had a lot of precipitation, which fell as snow up high, so the summer snows melted during the day but ran down over the cliffs and froze at night. Being the north face, and that the Cables route ascends a dihedral, much of the resulting ice simply stayed through the daylight in the shady recesses of the rock.

I carried only a light rack, but was highly motivated, so I selected a sunnier dihedral to the left of the Cables route which looked like it would go. The rock was great with a finger sized crack in the back. Due to relatively fewer pieces I had to run it out, but I enjoyed the airy perch. I encountered some ice. It is surprising what one thinks of, but my clear thought when I was wedging my fist into icy sections of the crack where it widened, “Gee, that feels good on my knuckles (which I had banged up crack climbing at Lumpy two days prior).”

Once above the technical pitches, Susan lead us up a winding path that traversed across toward the top of the Diamond and then up to the summit. She was the first to see the hordes swarming around in the morning sun. We had arrived a 9:30 a.m. and the summit was crawling with folks arriving from the tourist route.

2nd Pitch - White Whale

After the obligatory summit shots we headed back over boulders and down toward the Diamond, reversing our approach to the top of the Cables. Two raps led us back to the down climb/scramble to Chasm View. It looked like we were the only ones to climb a North Face route that day, as the ice scared off a Denver pair we met back at Chasm View. They lived close enough to wait for dry rock!

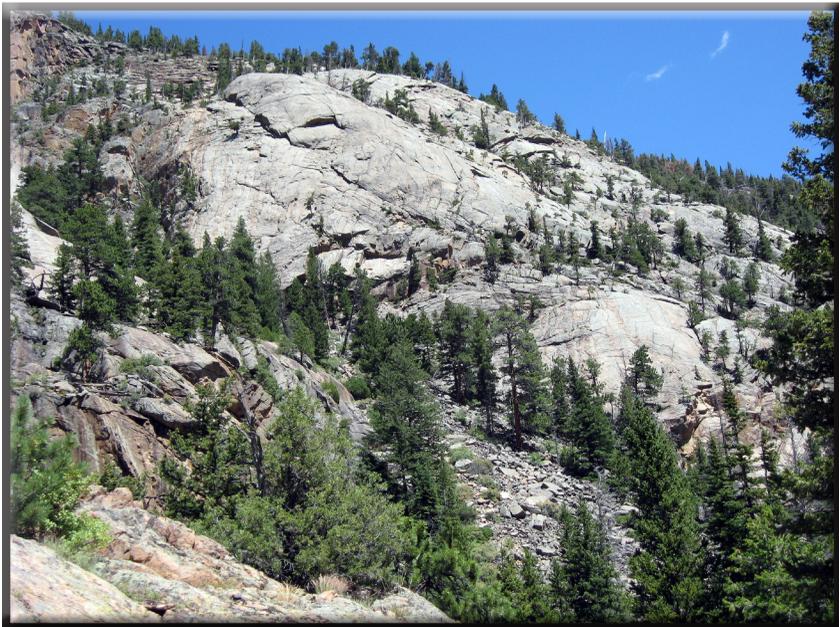

Actually Susan and I chuckled each time we met obvious climbers headed up hill during our descent. It became our running joke that each pair, when asked, would say that they were headed toward up to do the Casual Route ... a testament to group-think and a lemming-like consciousness among climbers to select popular routes while foregoing equally good ones nearby.

We took our time returning and didn't get back to the car until 4:30 p.m. The stats for the day – good climb, 5,000+ feet elevation gain, but a little less than the 16 mile roundtrip on the Keyhole route.

The last full day of climbing we headed up Fern Valley to the Lost World, a neat and remote grouping of crags above the Pond. Our targeted climb was Goblins Slab (4-pitches, 5.5) on Gnome Dome. This day we didn't see any other climbers in our vicinity and thoroughly enjoyed the adventuresome route finding. Easy enough climbing (low fifth class) but absent frequent and easy protection makes for sufficient challenges.

We would recommend all three venues to anyone else headed north to beat the heat.

Footnotes: Car-pooling is optional on all outings and is not part of the outing. The outing begins at the trailhead designated by the Outing Leader and ends at the same place. Each participant should bring a First Aid kit. If you leave the outing, with or without the leader's permission, you are considered to be on your own until you rejoin the group. Each participant will be required to sign an AMC Activity Release Form at the beginning of the outing. Participation in AMC outings requires club membership. Outings vary in degree of danger. When you participate in an outing you should be both physically and mentally prepared and equipped with the appropriate gear. You should always be aware of the risks involved in outdoor activities and conduct yourselves accordingly. The Outing Leader is not responsible for your safety; you are. Please contact the Outing Leader before going on an outing, discussing your capabilities with the Outing Leader. You must be over 18 years of age to participate, or must be accompanied by a parent or responsible adult, and obtain prior consent from the Outing Leader. Those accompanying minors are responsible for the minor's safety.
